About the Journal

The Journal of Law and Sustainable Development, indexed journal in SCOPUS and Q2 Scimago serves as a dynamic forum for understanding and advancing the scientific consensus in the law field. Also, the sustainable development goals of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development are considered by the journal. This open access journal is edited by FACMED - Faculty of Medical and Law Sciences (Brazil) in partnership with Open Access Publications LLC (United States of America).

The United Nations Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) are specific research areas that are helping solve real-world problems. They are part of a plan to end poverty, protect the planet, and improve the lives and prospects of everyone by 2030. The 15-year plan has 17 goals with 169 targets aimed at stimulating action in areas of critical importance to humanity and the environment.

It is more indispensable and urgent than ever to achieve the 2030 global Agenda for Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) by United Nations and to re-build a more sustainable and inclusive socio-economic system for human societies on both the local and global scales. While all the human activities including businesses must deal with social challenges and problems we face today in a post-COVID-19 world, in order to ensure such human activities more accessible to all people, finance is one of the key factors in socio-economic system to work towards the SDGs.

Dear Editor-in-Chief,

My name is Endang Pandamdari as the corresponding author for this article

We would like to submit the enclosed manuscript entitled “Juridical Analysis Of The Transfer Of Land Rights That Was Not Made Before The PPAT”, which we wish to be considered for publication in “Journal of Law and Sustainable Development”.

This manuscript has been approved for publication by all authors, and no conflict of interest was found in its submission. This work is hereby declared to be original research and has not been published or considered for publication elsewhere, either in whole or in part. The undersigned authors declare that they have approved the attached manuscript.

Objective: The aim of the research is to analyze the juridical aspects of the transfer of land rights which are not carried out before the Land Deed Making Official (PPAT). Transfer of land rights is a legal process that involves the transfer of ownership from one party to another. PPAT plays an important role in ensuring the validity and enforceability of land transactions by carrying out the transfer process officially and transparently. However, there are situations where the transfer of land rights is carried out without involving PPAT.

Method: The research method used is normative legal juridical analysis in this article covering aspects of validity, legal protection and consequences of the transfer of land rights that do not involve PPAT. The author identifies problems that arise when land transactions are carried out informally, such as the risk of ownership disputes and unclear legal status of land.

Results: Involving PPAT in every land transaction is a crucial step to maintain the validity and validity of the transfer of land rights, as well as preventing potential legal conflicts in the future. Thus, this article contributes to an understanding of the urgency of PPAT’s role in ensuring legal certainty in the context of the transfer of land rights in Indonesia.

I hope this paper is suitable for “Journal of Law and Sustainable Development”

Thank You very much

We are looking forward to your kindly response soon.
